had been started in May, were continued in July. As no reports were obtained from the border crossing stations that shipments of discarded weapons were returned to the USSR, it must be concluded that the arrival of new weapons will effectively increase the fighting power of Soviet Army units in East Germany. A total of about 350 armored personnel carriers and about 250 rocket launchers arrived in East Germany prior to July. [REDACTED]

These supply operations appeared to have been continued in August. No other special supply operations are discernible. The 77 carloads of unidentified military goods are believed to have included motor vehicle spare parts, engineer equipment and medical equipment. Because of insufficient data, these goods could not be broken down into the individual fields of supply.
